PROFESSIONAL AND TEACHING EXPERIENCE

- 2021 Course Instructor, Introduction to Health Disparities and Making the Connection between Structure, Social Determinants and Health Equity. Brown University, School of Public Health seminar for undergraduate students. This course is an introductory course that provides a broad overview of health disparities in the United States and examine them through intersecting structural and social determinants. Summer semester.
- 2021 Course Instructor, Globalization and the Arts. IE Brown Executive MBA Program. Teaching second part of the course focusing on entrepreneurship in a global context, exploring the intersectionality of race/ethnicity, gender, class, immigrant status and power and privilege in entrepreneurial endeavors. Fall semester.
- 2018-2021 Course Instructor, Intersectionality and Health Inequities: Structural and Social Determinants of Health and Illness. Brown University, School of Public Health seminar course for graduate, undergraduate, and pre-med students. This course examines the contribution of structural and sociopolitical and economic factors to U.S. health disparities. Spring semester.
- 2019-2021 Course Instructor, Global Dynamics, and Critical Perspectives on Immigrant Entrepreneurship in the United States. Brown University, The Jonathan M. Nelson Center for Entrepreneurship. This course examines today’s emerging immigrant entrepreneurs among national origin groups that historically had low rates of self-employment, such as Mexicans and Filipinos, and among the newest of the more recent immigrant groups, such as Vietnamese, Cambodians, Bolivians, Ethiopians, and Eritreans. This course also examines the specific role that immigrant women and refugees play as entrepreneurs and inequities in the U.S. labor market.
- 2018-2019 Course Instructor, Qualitative Methods: Advanced Theoretical and Methodological Frameworks in Health Research. Brown University, School of Public Health seminar course for graduate students (MPH and PhD students). This course examines a broader understanding of theoretical frameworks related to qualitative research methods. Data collection methods: key-informant interviews, participant observation, field work, memo writing, and coding. Fall Semester.

Fall 2012 Adjunct Course Instructor, Sociology 150: Contemporary Asian American Issues, Pomona College

2010-2011 Adjunct Course Instructor, Required Theory Course: Human Behavior and the Social Environment, USC School of Social Work
