9. TEACHING

BIOL 3518: Social Medicine

Fall 2023

Co-Instructor, Warren Alpert Medical School of Brown University

Four-week clinical elective for third- and fourth-year medical students that roots theory in practice by tasking students with providing longitudinal social support to patients of the Center for Primary Care at Brown Health. Students are exposed to the social, economic and political conditions that impact health, disease and the practice of medicine. In addition to direct patient care, students will participate in weekly didactics on the theory and practice of social medicine.

Health Coverage 101: Navigating Health Insurance Coverage in RI

2022-23

Faculty Advisor, Warren Alpert Medical School of Brown University

Introduces medical students to the landscape of the US health insurance system, with a focus on understanding how patients interact with insurance coverage. The course covers topics related to the structure of the US healthcare system, understanding the insurance enrollment process, interpreting benefits of coverage, and alternative healthcare/insurance models.
