The function and operation of asset markets; the determinants of the prices of stocks, bonds, options and futures; the relations between risk, return and investment management; the capital asset pricing model, normative portfolio management, and market efficiency.
Prerequisites: intermediate microeconomics, econometrics

Co-instructor: UNIV 0910 Learning Transfer: Integrating Sport, School and Life
30 students (capped) Spring 2024

The ultimate goal of education is to teach students course content and skills in the hopes that the learning and skills will transfer to other situations, helping students become better problem solvers and citizens in the real world. This course examines and scaffolds learning transfer in the context of sports into the classroom. In particular, we discuss learning through the pursuit of sports and athletic competition, and draw the analogs into effective learning practices for the classroom context. We will have particular emphasis on high performing teams, drawing analogs between athletic teams and study groups/group work in the classroom. This course also explicitly recognizes that students are often novices in learning and intentionally scaffolds the transfer process so students can detect, elect and connect learning across the two realms.

Co-Instructor: Econ 0110 Principles of Economics Spring 2023
208 students

Co-Instructor: Fall 2022: 512 students (end with 503);
Instructor: Spring 2015: 379 students (ending with 361);
Co-Instructor: Spring 2014 (ending with 341 students);
Spring 2013 (ending with 271 students)

Extensive coverage of economic issues, institutions, and vocabulary, plus an introduction to economic analysis and its application to current social problems. Required for all economics concentrators. Serves as a general course for students who will take no other economics courses and want a broad introduction to the discipline.

Advising Professor: Global Independent Study Program (GLISP) Fall 2013
"Research on Primary Care in Scotland"
For Emma Brody '15 at the University of Edinburgh, Brown
Plus One program, Scotland, United Kingdom

This independent study investigated the Scottish health care system, with emphasis on the primary care. It consisted of readings that provide a brief introduction to the structure of health care systems in the United States and Scotland and a framework from which interview questions were developed. The research component of the course incorporated local Scottish primary physician interviews to understand their perspective on primary care delivery, practice patterns and population health. The final qualitative paper drew comparisons between the health care systems of the U.S. and Scotland with conclusions about the nature of primary care and its role within a health care system given different payment methods.

Instructor: Econ 1110 Intermediate Microeconomics Fall 2012
Capped at 90 students, ending with 82

Tools for use in microeconomic analysis, with some public policy applications. Theory of consumer demand, theories of the firm, market behavior, welfare economics, and general equilibrium. Prerequisites: principles of economics, first-semester calculus

Instructor: PHP 0310 Health Care in the United States Spring 2009
116 students, ending with 107

Co-director: Spring 2011, Spring 2012
Guest lecturer: (4 sessions), Spring 2010

Introduction to the health care delivery system. An overview of the U.S. health care financing, delivery and regulatory system. Considers the interaction between paying for and providing and assuring the quality of health services; changes in one component of the system inevitably affect the others. Addresses the balance between employer-funded health insurance, publicly-funded health insurance and the consequences of not being insured. Six discussion sections arranged during the semester.
